

Sandie Yeaman

From the trials of an abandoned toddler to the triumphs of a published author and successful business owner, Sandie Yeaman's life story is nothing short of extraordinary. Born in 1948 to a teenage mother and father, Sandie's journey began with significant adversity, as she was left at the hospital as a newborn and entered the foster care system by the age of 18 months. Yet, these early challenges only fueled her remarkable resilience and drive.

Navigating the complexities of the foster care system, Sandie diligently put herself through school and became an educator at Boys Town, where she profoundly impacted many lives. Alongside raising her own three children and numerous foster children, Sandie's journey continued to flourish. She became a published author, sharing her inspiring story to uplift and motivate others.

In addition to her literary accomplishments, Sandie founded Gwen's Gift, a distinctive shopping experience tailored for those in memory care, significantly enhancing the lives of its patrons. Her dedication to community service earned her the prestigious Jefferson Award, underscoring her belief in the power of kindness and the impact of giving back.

Sandie's life is also deeply enriched by lifelong friendships. With a network of close-knit companions spanning over six decades, she cherishes these enduring bonds, which have provided unwavering support and honest counsel throughout her journey. Sandie's vibrant and unique path continues to inspire everyone who crosses her way, a testament to her indomitable spirit and the extraordinary impact of her life's work.
